The challenge

Understanding how to build TRUST and CONFIDENCE among the attractions-visiting public

Helping us to get back on our feet quickly but also to sustain our recovery

Two major practical questions attractions likely to have ahead of re-opening:

- 🕒 How should we physically present ourselves on re-opening to build public trust and confidence in visiting?
- 🕒 What communications messages should we put out there to build confidence and capture the public mood?

How are we generating insights to meet this challenge?

Periodic waves of online research among representative samples of the attractions-visiting public:

Anxiety around visiting indoor attractions persists, even following the announcement that these can now re-open in England

ALVA

Attractions Recovery Tracker

How currently feeling about visiting attractions when they re-open: spontaneous mentions (%)

At the moment I would probably only visit outdoor attractions that allow for plenty of social distancing. However I hope they are all able to come through the other side of this as they provide for great days out and learning experiences. I hope to return to visiting these places soon, but I imagine me and my family will probably wait till more is known on COVID and we're certain safety measures are in place before we start thinking of revisiting indoor places.

To be honest I personally will not visit any indoor attractions yet. Although it may be safe, it is just not enjoyable having to be careful what you touch and social distancing etc. Attractions and days out should be fun and with the current restrictions I would rather not go

If the attraction is outside and quite spacious then I'd happily visit, I'd take my own food and drinks though. If it's an indoor attraction, I'm not so sure. My one big worry about visiting anywhere, is the cleanliness of the toilet facilities. But then I've always worried about that anyway, Coronavirus or no Coronavirus!

Happy to visit outdoor attractions, still a little stressed and anxious about indoor venues with the enclosed spaces and people

Main barrier to visiting is still around social distancing (especially worries about fellow visitors or practical effectiveness), although this has softened slightly following the reduction from 2m to 1m+

ALVA

Attractions Recovery Tracker

% of the market who spontaneously mention 'social distancing'
when asked about visiting attractions

(11% at Wave 3)

I feel like it's a good thing that things are returning to normal but as with the opening of pubs I feel like people just can't be trusted yet so for me personally I will still be self-isolating

Difficult to maintain social distancing and enforcing families to stay away from others, when they want to have a good time and freedom within a attraction that paid to go into.

I am concerned that people will forget about the social distancing measures whist in a queue and then get annoyed when someone speaks to them.

I want to be able to visit places I love and have memberships too, but I worry about those people who haven't/won't follow the rules

My feelings are that it is too soon to visit and feel totally safe. I would worry about people not obeying the social distancing rules, and staff cannot be everywhere to make sure that this is carried out.

Anxiety around using all forms of public transport to travel to attractions remains high

Fine about the attractions. It's the travelling by public transport which I find a barrier. OK if I can drive there

Opening with as full an offer as possible is important – there are growing numbers of spontaneous comments which are beginning to question the value of the experience on re-opening

ALVA

Attractions Recovery Tracker

Will the experience be as good as before? (4% spontaneous mentions at Wave 4)

Unsure as most are only 1/2 open, just the gardens, no cafes etc what about toilets?

Fairly anxious that even though risk may be low and there may be lots of contingencies in place, it will somewhat diminish the experience by constant sanitising etc

I am looking forward to visiting heritage railways again. However, I am concerned that the quality of the experience may be poor e.g. not hot food which one can sit down and eat. There may also be queues

I fear that visits will not be as relaxed, concentrating on ensuring social distancing and hygiene will take some of my focus away from leisurely walking around the area and studying the exhibits. Staff monitoring and control of entry and numbers will make it too regimented. I want to return but I want it to be a leisurely relaxed experience as in the past.

I don't mind visiting attractions, however I want the full experience not a mediocre one so am hesitant to go

I hope that they have good safety and social distancing (or other relevant) measures in place. I worry that certain features/places might be closed due to not being able to socially distance and it might not be worth going.

Will be happy when the food and drink parts are open.

But there remains high anxiety around using these services at attractions, especially toilets, indoor catering and interactives

ALVA

Wave 4: Will feel more anxious or uncomfortable about using than usual at attractions (%)

○ Timing of ALVA Attractions Recovery Tracker waves

Social distancing and mask usage must be enforced or I will feel incredibly unsafe

I hope to revisit the London History museum and the Science Museum. I'm worried people won't be wearing masks and I'm worried I might catch coronavirus

I'm apprehensive because when out and about most people do not wear masks which is concerning. I think it should be mandatory

Will not be visiting attractions until I see number of Covid 19 cases much lower. I might consider sooner if mask wearing was compulsory.

Will not be visiting. A lot of people don't want to wear masks and other protection, so I don't think it's safe.

Indeed, research from Aurora MR indicates that there now appears to be widespread public support for the wearing of face masks in enclosed public spaces

Four in five UK adults think that a requirement to wear a face mask in enclosed public spaces is a good idea

■ Better if face mask required
■ Better if face mask not required

Q1. As the lockdown begins to end, what would your reaction be if it now became a requirement across the whole of the UK to wear a face mask or a face covering in enclosed public spaces, such as on public transport and in shops, cafes, pubs and restaurants?

Q2. In the current times, in which, if any, of these locations or situations do you think it would be best if people were required to wear a face mask or face covering?

Key take-outs

ALVA

Key take-outs / 1 (Wave 4: 8-11 July)

Against a challenging backdrop of decreasing general optimism around Covid-19 in the UK, there has been some growth in confidence in attraction visiting – particularly for categories previously unable to open. News around the 4 July permission to re-open in England will undoubtedly have helped

Those previously claiming that they would revisit ‘as soon as the opportunity arises’ appear to be true to their word, with 21% of the market (around 8.5m adults) claiming to have already visited since re-opening

Among those visiting attractions since re-opening, reaction to safety measures has been fairly good, although nervousness among visitors to attractions which were only allowed to open recently is apparent

However, around half the attractions-visiting market remains stubbornly cautious about visiting. Main visit barrier is lack of confidence in attractions’ ability to control distancing, led by concerns over fellow visitors compliance. Can we demonstrate and communicate that these are working well in our attractions – especially those indoors, where concerns are highest?

Are there some social inclusion issues beginning to emerge? Early returning is much less likely among the older generation and among those who are not working

Key take-outs / 2 (Wave 4: 8-11 July)

There is strong evidence that the 'We're Good to Go' mark will have a much-needed, major positive impact upon visit confidence and almost a quarter of the market already claim to have seen this mark

There is clear and increasing demand for a full visit experience to be available on re-opening, with significant proportions not visiting if services and facilities were to be closed. Opening with mitigation measures is better than keeping closed

However, as indoor attractions re-open, high anxiety in the market remains around these indoor facilities – especially toilets, catering outlets, interactive visit elements and events. Demonstrating and communicating safety measures pre-visit will be even more critical than for outdoor attractions

Two-thirds of the market would feel more comfortable about visiting an attraction if masks / face coverings were compulsory, a significant growth since June and reflecting wider public opinion and growth in use in recent weeks. Is now the time to take the socially responsible line and embrace their use in attractions?

Attractions located in tourism hotspots, perhaps more than ever, need to keep local residents onside as they seek to attract summer visitors – 71% of residents in these areas would rather visitors stay away

Update on ALVA Visitor Recovery Benchmarking initiative

ALVA Visitor Recovery Benchmarking

ALVA

Launched on 4 July: 35 attractions committed plus conversations with many more, UK-wide – already c.1,000 survey responses among those who have opened

A reminder:

- Visitor tracking survey to understand how your visitors are feeling about new safety measures, impact on visit experience, as well as how visitor profile, motivations and comms triggers have changed in this period
- Online post-visit survey sent to visitors
- Results via online dashboard and analysis tool on a shared basis - benchmarks for sectors and individual attractions
- Results updated weekly
- Low cost - £750 per attraction, with large discounts for multiple attractions
